Other Relevant Experience

Shirley Lin, a high-profile attorney in Taiwan, has nearly 20 years of experience in transnational legal practice and is noted for providing comprehensive legal and tactical advice for her clients both at home and abroad, and for representing them in a diverse range of disputes and litigation with her strong academic background and first-hand experience in the field of public affairs. She is a Panellist with HKIAC and adjudicated several UDRP cases.

Lin earned an LL.M. from Northwestern University School of Law (NU Law) and an LL.B. from National Taiwan University. When pursuing her S.J.D. studies at NU Law, she also obtained an unprecedented fellowship from there as well as a young scholar award from a prestigious foundation solely funded by the Taiwanese government. Moreover, Lin's researches on cutting-edge issues of international law have not only been published in worldwide recognized academic journals but have been greatly benefiting her clients in resolving some of the toughest transnational disputes.

In addition to her thriving legal career, Lin has been active in politics and other public affairs in Taiwan. More specifically, she was once elected as a Member of National Assembly; served as CEO of the most influential NGO in Taiwan's judicial reform; frequently appeared on nationally broadcast television and radio programs as commentator; and had her own law-related column on a nationwide newspaper. Because of her outstanding achievements, Lin was recognized as a "Rising Star" in law and politics both by the Common Wealth magazine and by Central News Agency in 2004 and 2008.

With her keen insight into public affairs and geopolitics, Lin can provide all-round legal and strategic advice, which usually goes above and beyond her clients' expectations. Lin currently is based in Taipei, and is frequently invited to work with multi-national companies especially on investment projects in the Greater China region.
