ABOUT THE WORKSHOP

The internet has brought about a revolutionary development in the traditional economic model. It has enabled and empowered businesses to expand their markets and render services to large groups of e-consumers like never before. Registration of domain names worldwide, as a result, is on the rise. As of 2017, there are approximately 332.4 million domain name registrations in the world. This has given rise to a plethora of domain name attacks and trademark infringement requiring urgent attention.

So, what do you do when you find out a website that is confusingly similar to yours, or worst still, your website that is not actually yours?

Are you prepared to protect your trademark rights?

Are you prepared to secure and develop your business on the internet?

As part of our efforts in promoting the healthy development of the domain name industry, the Asian International Arbitration Centre (AIAC) invites you to the Roadshow on Domain Name Disputes in New Delhi. The programme focusses on providing an overview of domain name dispute resolution and aims to cover the most relevant substantive and procedural issues relating to this field.

Representatives from in-house Legal Departments, IT Departments, trademark practitioners and trademark bodies are welcome to attend the event.
